As followers of the Buddha, it is our duty to create an environment, to embrace, to hold, to propagate with the Dharma. It is not just our duty, it is our practice. We need to create situations in which people can hear, contemplate, and analyze the Dharma, and eventually put it into practice.

Khyentse Foundation’s core mission is to facilitate whoever wishes to study or practice the Dharma, 50, 60, or even 100 years from now. So far, I think it is safe to say that we have been doing things that benefit not just one or two monasteries, we have gone beyond the narrow zone. So please remember that all your effort is planting a very important seed, and you are continuing to nurture this seed.

Many decades from now, after you die, your work, our work, is going to leave an imprint, a vital legacy of propagating the Buddhadharma in the world.
